

Table of Contents

Keep talking about domestic-violence victims

By Darlene Thomas

October 13, 2017 5:00 PM

Last month marked the 23rd anniversary of the Violence Against Women Act. As often happens during annual milestones, reflection on this not-so-distant past was the topic of conversation among advocates in my mission.

We recalled how many members of Congress contested the need for a federal law to protect victims and remembered debates that referred to domestic violence as a private family matter. Some opponents argued the act was a threat to marriage; others obstructed protections based on fiscal concerns. Our nation was talking about domestic violence, and these were difficult conversations with deep roots and many intersections.

Local organizing bolstered public support, and VAWA passed in 1994. It created programs to provide legal assistance, safe exchange and visitation for children, transitional housing for survivors and their children, and community-coordinated response to the crimes. These new efforts complemented existing support from the Victims of Crime Act and encouraged the expansion of state and local programs.

Read more here: http://www.kentucky.com/opinion/op-ed/article178761816.html?anf=TOP_STO...

Last updated on October 23, 2017.

Print

Table of Contents

NEWS

News & publications

The news about recent activities for needed peoples.

More News

20 Aug 2025

AppalReD offering free FEMA appeal clinics

HAZARD, Ky. (WYMT) - AppalReD is offering free legal clinics for tornado and...

Continue Reading about AppalReD offering free FEMA appeal clinics

6 Aug 2025

AppalReD Legal Aid Hosts Family Law Clinics with Generous Support from Kentucky Bar Foundation

Prestonsburg, KY - AppalReD Legal Aid recently received a $15,000 grant from...

Continue Reading about AppalReD Legal Aid Hosts Family Law Clinics with Generous Support from Kentucky Bar Foundation

PDF downloaded from <https://www.ardfky.org/node/157/keep-talking-about-domestic-violence-victims>