

'Nobody to pick from.' How opioids are devastating the workforce in Eastern Kentucky.

By Bill Estep

bestep@herald-leader.com

June 27, 2018 11:34 AM

Manchester

The pickings have gotten slimmer when Mike Bowling needs to hire someone for his convenience stores in London and Manchester, where he also has a tobacco store.

"This is the hardest I've ever seen getting workers and keeping workers," said Bowling, who has been in business 18 years. "You just ain't got nobody to pick from."

It's clear to Bowling that Kentucky's drug crisis has affected the workforce, causing higher turnover, bringing additional costs to train new employees and fueling employee thefts.

Recent research bears out that the state's high use of painkilling drugs called opioids appears to have reduced the labor pool.

Read more here:

<https://www.kentucky.com/news/state/article213189309.html#storylink=cpy>

Last updated on July 02, 2018.

Print

Table of Contents

NEWS

News & publications

The news about recent activities for needed peoples.

More News

4 Jun 2025

From the Goodwill Insider: Cassandra and Casey of Project Renew

We love it when good news spreads—and recently, Goodwill Insider shined a...

Continue Reading

2 Jun 2025

White House Budget Proposes Elimination of Legal Services Corporation, Stripping Support from Kentucky Families Facing Natural Disasters, Domestic Violence, and More

Prestonsburg, Kentucky—The White House’s proposed federal budget for Fiscal...

Continue Reading