

University of Kentucky bill collection feud heads to Kentucky Supreme Court

By Darla Carter | June 6, 2019 9:30 am

Lady Justice
Image not found or type unknown

Courtesy of Pixabay

The Kentucky Supreme Court will hear arguments Thursday on whether the University of Kentucky should be allowed to use the state Department of Revenue to collect unpaid medical bills, a practice that can lead to patients' bank accounts being garnished and state refund checks being withheld.

Several legal groups that represent low-income Kentuckians charge that the practice is unfair to economically vulnerable residents and have filed briefs in support of Sarah R. Moore, a Lexington woman who was billed more than $21,000 for services that she and her family received from UK HealthCare in 2011 and 2012.

"UK HealthCare subjects its patients to a collections process on steroids," the nonprofit Kentucky Equal Justice Center says in its brief. That includes "surprising UK HealthCare's patients with extrajudicial levies of both their wages and bank accounts, liens on their properties, and seizure of their state tax returns."

Read More

Last updated on June 07, 2019.

Print

Table of Contents

NEWS

News & publications

The news about recent activities for needed peoples.

More News

4 Jun 2025

From the Goodwill Insider: Cassandra and Casey of Project Renew

We love it when good news spreads—and recently, Goodwill Insider shined a...

Continue Reading

2 Jun 2025

White House Budget Proposes Elimination of Legal Services Corporation, Stripping Support from Kentucky Families Facing Natural Disasters, Domestic Violence, and More

Prestonsburg, Kentucky—The White House’s proposed federal budget for Fiscal...

Continue Reading